Participatory workshops are an opportunity for professionals, each working in their own way for the protection of architectural and urban heritage and its adaptation to contemporary needs, to exchange views and reflect together on questions raised by modern developments. This workshop is led by Orianne Dupont reporter for Le Moniteur and has been organised by Marie-Astrid Mendes-Luiz, in charge of architectural quality at the centre for the promotion of architecture of Bordeaux Métropole. They invite participants from a variety of backgrounds including architects, urban planners, engineers, lawyers, construction economists, historians and cultural activity leaders. For the current cycle the thematic is about sustainability.
